

Carrollton Christian Fellowship

Genesis 1:26 - Questions

How does the concept of God as Creator shape our understanding of human purpose and identity?

In what ways might our cultural expectations or personal desires conflict with God's timing and methods of transformation?

How can we reconcile the idea of being created in God's image with the reality of human sin and imperfection?

What are the implications of viewing humanity as God's 'highest creation' for how we treat ourselves and others?

How might understanding ourselves as 'image bearers' of God impact our daily choices and interactions?

What role does Scripture play in the process of being renewed or 'recreated' in God's image?

How can we balance the tension between God's sovereign work in our lives and our responsibility to participate in our spiritual growth?

In what ways might modern technology or cultural trends challenge or distort our understanding of being created in God's image?

How does the concept of a 'new creation in Christ' relate to the original creation account in Genesis?

What are some practical ways we can cultivate a deeper awareness of God's ongoing creative work in our lives and in the world around us?