

Carrollton Christian Fellowship

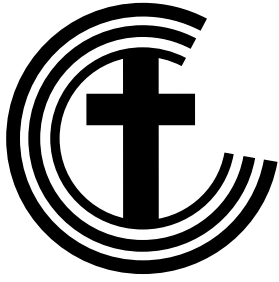

How does understanding our creation in God's image impact our sense of value and purpose, both individually and collectively?

In what ways might our modern culture be diminishing or distorting the concept of humans as image-bearers of God?

How can Christians better exemplify being 'living epistles' and image-bearers of God in today's society?

What are some practical ways we can fulfill our role to 'subdue' and have 'dominion' over creation while still being good stewards?

How might a deeper understanding of God's design for gender and marriage shape our response to current cultural debates on these topics?

Carrollton Christian Fellowship

In what ways can the church better demonstrate the restorative power of Christ in broken relationships and diminished self-worth?

How can we balance asking sincere questions about our faith while still maintaining a firm foundation in the truths of Genesis 1-2?

What are some ways we can cultivate a deeper appreciation for the intrinsic value of all humans, regardless of their actions or circumstances?

How might our approach to environmental stewardship and technological advancement change if we truly embraced our God-given role in creation?

In what ways can we foster a church culture that encourages both strong convictions about biblical truth and genuine love for those who disagree?

Genesis 1:27-2:25: Questions