

Carrollton Christian Fellowship

How does the concept of God's patience in approaching Adam and Eve after their sin challenge or affirm our understanding of divine justice and mercy?

In what ways might the curse on the serpent (Satan) to 'eat dust' and face ultimate defeat relate to spiritual warfare in our lives today?

How does the first gospel declaration in Genesis 3:15 foreshadow the entire biblical narrative, and what implications does this have for our understanding of God's redemptive plan?

What insights can we gain about gender roles and marital relationships from God's words to Eve after the fall, and how might these apply in contemporary society?

What parallels can we draw between the tree of life in Eden and Jesus Christ as the source of eternal life?

Carrollton Christian Fellowship

How does Adam's naming of Eve as 'mother of all living' demonstrate faith in God's promises, and what can we learn from this about hope in difficult circumstances?

In what ways does the provision of animal skins for Adam and Eve prefigure the concept of atonement in Christian theology?

How might the placement of cherubim at the entrance to Eden reflect God's desire for relationship with humanity rather than just punishment?

How does the idea that there are only two religions - fig leaves (human works) and God's provision - challenge our understanding of faith and salvation?

In what ways does Jesus' bearing of the curse for humanity demonstrate the depth of God's love and the extent of His redemptive plan?